Texas Federation of Republican Women Region 14 - Senate District 25

Volume 10.11 • Nov. 2025

President's Message

Congratulations to YOU - Canyon Lake Republican Women for WINNING awards for Most Political Activity Hours / Jumbo Club; and The John Goodwin Tower Award, at the 35th Biennial Convention of the Texas Federation of Republican Women! Your CLRW delegates were also recognized as leaders among the 2025 Convention Committee for providing decorations at the Awards celebrations during the Convention. I experienced such an overwhelming feeling of love and appreciation for our mighty club, as I witnessed CLRW being honored as one of the most outstanding clubs in Texas! CLRW epitomizes strength, unity, and grace while keeping our commitments to conservative values and achieving each of our club objectives. What a beautiful legacy to welcome our 50th year, in 2026!

Let's Keep Winning!

Speaking of CELEBRATIONS, we have a wonderful Christmas/ Installation Luncheon planned for you, as we welcome the 2026 Officers being elected this month, and bring this incredible year to a close. Please make certain to get your ticket, and join us as we share great food, fun memories, and show gratitude for all of God's blessings!

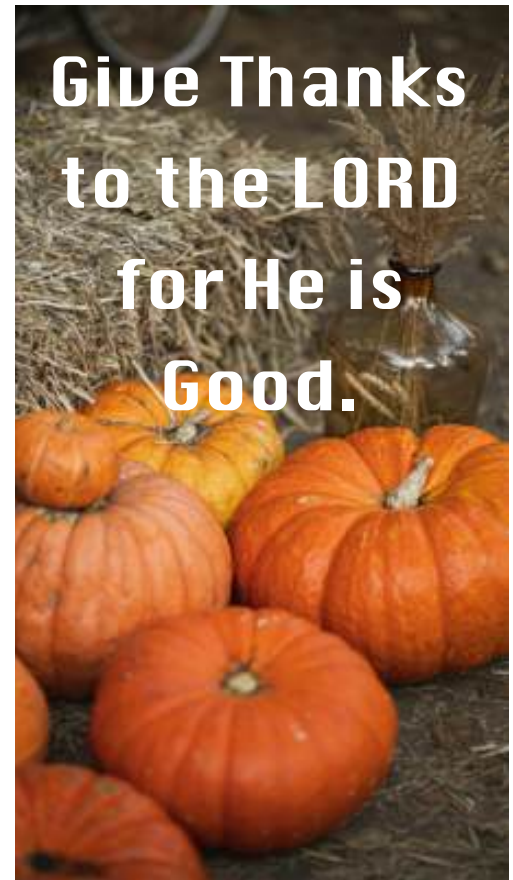

Thank you for the honor of serving you. Have a Happy Thanksgiving filled with blessings and great memories.

Thank you for your dedication to keep Texas RED and our cherished country,

FREE!

God Bless Each of YOU,

Jan Hunt
President

Did You Know?

The name November comes from novem, the Latin word for nine. It initially was the Roman calendars' ninth month. After the Gregorian calendar added January and February, November became the 11th month, but its ancient name stuck.

Americanism

A Day to Honor

This month, we celebrated Veterans Day on Tuesday, November 11, 2025. This federal holiday is officially celebrated on the 11th of November each year, no matter what day of the week on which it falls.

A brief history about this momentous holiday: Veterans Day in the United States was originally known as Armistice Day. It commemorated the signing of the agreement that ended World War I. That signing took place at 11:00 a.m., November 11, 1918. The first Armistice Day was celebrated by President Woodrow Wilson in 1919.

November 11th became a legal holiday in 1938 by way of an act of Congress. The name changed from "Armistice Day" to "Veterans Day" occurred in 1954. The original intent of this holiday was to honor those who had perished in service to their country. After the name change to Veterans Day, "it became a way to honor all men and women who have served in the armed forces of the United States of America."

It is most important to recognize and show our appreciation for all persons who have served in the United States military, both in wartime or peacetime and whether living or deceased. We pause to honor these brave men and women for their unselfish and dedicated service to our country.

Maybe you are a veteran. If so, we are deeply grateful for your service. If you personally know a veteran, please thank them for their service. Take time to also remember those veterans you will never have the opportunity to meet.

All are our armed forces Heroes!

Donna Lancon,
Americanism Chair

Leadership

Blazing New Trails, Finding Our Way

Now that our November election is over and we know the outcome of all the 17 Constitutional Amendments, it is time to look forward to our next year. As a club, we need to grow! I look forward to talking to our CLRW TFRW delegates and ask what they learned at the convention. I have read from one TFRW delegate: "One of the greatest take aways isn't just what we learned, but who we met. Every conversation, discussion, and networking moment was an opportunity to build relationships with outstanding individuals who brought fresh perspectives and powerful messages to your clubs."

We need to add to our membership so that we can be more engaged, learning and growing together. I have encouraged you all to be the back up to your precinct chair to get out the vote. Now, your CLRW leadership encourages you to use the push cards we have to our best advantage. Become a recruiter for our club! We all come into contact with like minded women in our daily lives and they most likely think like us! Invite them to visit our web site, read our newsletters and see the good we do for our community and our Republican candidates. Ask them to join you for a meeting (we have excellent guest speakers). You could even go so far as to write a personal note to someone to be a guest at one of our meetings or events like Janet Blum did for me! That personal touch can be the hook! Thank you, Janet for casting that line! I took the bait!

Leadership Chair

Mamdani's Grand Adventure

The following information regarding Mamdani's Campaign Promises is excerpted in part from an article by Bevan Hurley, dated Thursday October 30, 2025 from The Times, "Mamdani's Campaign Promises: What He's Pledged and How Much It Will Cost." Mr. Hurley's article lays out Mamdani's proposals, costs and the hurdles he must overcome especially with a New York Governor who does not support his proposals. Be sure to pay attention to the proposal's timelines and which city sectors aside from the police force will be affected. Lofty goals indeed and New York City will pay the price.

Mamdani's policy proposals — and how much they could cost:

- ◆ Universal childcare for children aged six weeks to five years - up to $9.6 billion;
- ◆ Building 200,000 housing units in ten years - $100 billion;
- ◆ Free buses for more than a million daily users - at least $800 million a year;
- ◆ Community safety department - $1 billion;
- ◆ City-run grocery stores - up to $100 million;
- ◆ Eliminate tuition fees at the City University of New York - loss of $800 million in Income;
- ◆ Minimum wage to $30 an hour by 2030.

Total cost: up to $112.3 billion

Mamdani says his policies will cost about $10 billion a year. Independent estimates put the cost, over time, at more than $100 billion. His meteoric win as Mayor of New York City has been propelled by a package of radical policy proposals estimated to cost $10 billion a year. The 34-year-old entered the mayor race as a relative outsider but vaulted into pole position, fueled by anger among New Yorkers over housing costs, transport, and stagnating wages. His campaign promised a Scandinavian-style makeover of city life: free buses, universal childcare, a rent freeze on stabilized apartments, publicly run grocery stores and a $30 minimum wage by the end of the decade.

Political Activities

The democratic socialist pledged to fund the agenda by raising taxes on businesses and the top 1 per cent of earners. But critics said the campaign's estimates are implausibly optimistic — and risk accelerating the flight of his targets to low-tax states such as Florida. An analysis of Mamdani's proposals indicates that he is likely to have underestimated the costs of his education, childcare and housing pledges by billions of dollars. Several policies — such as free tuition at the City University of New York and new bus lanes — have been put forward with no accompanying estimates at all.

Mamdani's most expensive promise is universal childcare for children aged six weeks to five years, which his campaign says would cost $5 to $7 billion a year.

Housing is his other cornerstone pledge. Mamdani has vowed to build 200,000 new units over ten years at a cost of $100 billion, to be financed in part by a $70 billion expansion of the city's long-term capital plan. That would require state approval to exceed the city's debt limit at a moment when both city and state finances have been strained by three straight years of deficits and pandemic-era borrowing.

Making buses free to New York's more than one million daily riders has been costed by the campaign $800 million a year, not including the cost of building new bus lanes to speed up journeys.

A new department of community safety, overseeing mental-health crisis response and homelessness outreach, has been priced at $1 billion. This would be paid for, in part, by cutting overtime for New York City police officers. A plan to establish five city-run food stores would cost a further $60 million. Independent estimates have put the cost closer to $100 million, assuming free rents and unionized staffing.

His rent freeze on the one million stabilized apartments in the city carries no direct cost to the city, but would be likely to squeeze landlords and building owners who are already facing higher maintenance and property tax bills. Meanwhile, his plan to eliminate tuition fees at the City University of New York would erase roughly $800 million in annual income.

Mamdani also proposes to lift the city's minimum wage to $30 an hour by 2030 — more than double the current state-wide rate — a policy that some economists believe would increase job automation and cripple sectors such as healthcare and hospitality.

To pay for his proposals, Mamdani says roughly $5 billion would be generated by lifting the state's corporate tax rate from 7.25 per cent to 11.5 per cent, and $4 billion by imposing a 2 per cent income surcharge on the top 1 per cent of earners. The remainder would be raised through procurement reform and stricter enforcement of unpaid fines.

Experts have said that Mamdani is underplaying the existing tax burden on city businesses. The Citizens Budget Commission, a non-partisan watchdog, has calculated that New York firms already face an effective tax rate of approximately 17.5 per cent once all additional levies are included.

Political Activities

Even if the sums did add up, Mamdani would need the support of Albany —where legislative leaders have the authority to block or amend them — to enact almost all the new taxes. Kathy Hochul, the Democratic governor of New York, has said she is “fundamentally opposed” to raising taxes on corporations or high earners, representing a formidable roadblock to Mamdani’s plans.

Mamdani has argued that the scale of the affordability crisis demands such lofty spending proposals. He has stated that long-term investment in universal childcare and housing would improve labor participation, reduce inequality and stabilize families — and that New York’s wealthy can afford to pay more.

What is GSAC?

Greater San Antonio Council is a great club networking group. It is a group of TFRW clubs in Senate District 25 and other districts as well. There are 5 meetings scheduled for 2026 and any member is welcome to attend. Lunch and meeting cost is $35 at Anne Marie’s Catering in San Antonio. This group is made up of Presidents or representatives from the area clubs and has interesting speakers from all over. All members are welcome to attend any or all of the meetings. The new meeting dates for 2026 are all on the first Thursday of the months listed: February 5, May 7, September 3, October 1 and December 3. See you there!

Carolyn Besselman
GSAC President

Update from the Comal County Chairman Anita Valdez

It is an honor to serve as your County Chairman. At our most recent CEC Meeting in October, I had the privilege of swearing in five new Precinct Chairs for vacant voting precincts in Comal County.

Our nominating committee has been working diligently to maintain a full slate of Precinct Chairs. With the ever-increasing population in Comal County there will be seven new voting precincts added as of January 1, 2026.

The County Headquarters located at 265 Landa Street has been bustling with visitors and candidates. The Primary season is upon us as the first day to be on the Primary Ballot was Saturday, November 8th. We had a steady stream of candidates, some with family in tow and application in hand. In addition, Wurstfest was underway as well as the Veterans Parade in downtown New Braunfels. The energy was palpable!

Since the horrible assassination of Charlie Kirk there has been a revival of sorts in that the populous have awakened. We have had folks call, stop by wanting to check their voter registration status and wanting to get involved. We also have filled the demand for Freedom and I am Charlie shirts and caps to add to our current inventory. Through a tragedy there seems to be a silver lining.

We have an opportunity to achieve new heights of success. Even though we are a red County we cannot take anything for granted. We must get out and vote in the primaries, possible runoff, and the general elections. Follow the template that worked in 2024; vote early and get ten like-minded people to the polls.

The last day to file to be on the primary ballot is December 8th at 6:00 p.m. The County will be hosting Candidate forums early next year so you the voter will have the opportunity to know who you are voting for. We also have conventions coming up next year. Know who your Precinct Chair is. Please join us in getting out the vote. We need election clerks and volunteers. Contact us by dropping by the Headquarters. Check us out, we have great shirts, caps, koozies and stickers, plus, plus. We rely on your donations to maintain our headquarters. We are open from 10-2 Monday through Friday. Follow us on Facebook and check out our website. We can do this; we must KEEP TEXAS RED!!!!

Thanksgiving's Champion: Sarah Josepha Hale

Based on an article by Catherine Boeckmann, Executive Digital Editor and Master Gardener, published in the Farmer's Almanac on October 14, 2025.

We celebrate Thanksgiving today thanks to Sarah Josepha Hale. Born Sarah Josepha Buell in 1788 in Newport, New Hampshire, she grew up on a farm with a natural curiosity and intelligence. Her mother introduced her to history and literature, while her brother Horatio shared his Dartmouth College education with her.

Despite women not being accepted as teachers in the early 1800s, Sarah established a private school at age 18. She taught until marrying David Hale in 1813, when she began writing stories and articles for local newspapers. Following David's death in 1822, Sarah supported her five children by running a women's hat shop before returning to teaching and writing. She published her first poetry collection, including the famous "Mary Had a Little Lamb," and released her first novel in 1827.

John Blake, a Congregational minister and girls' school headmaster, was impressed by Hale's novel and invited her to work at his Ladies' Magazine. She became America's first female magazine editor. Later, Louis Godey purchased Blake's magazine, merging it with Godey's Lady's Book while retaining Hale as editor. The publication became the premier ladies' magazine of the century, achieving the largest pre-Civil War subscription base in America with 150,000 readers.

Throughout her editorial career, Hale campaigned tirelessly for a national day of thanksgiving, writing hundreds of letters to governors, ministers, newspaper editors, and every U.S. president, requesting that the last Thursday in November be designated to "offer to God our tribute of joy and gratitude for the blessings of the year."

While Native Americans had celebrated harvest festivals for centuries and colonists had held thanksgiving services, no official holiday existed. In 1863, amid the Civil War, Hale's persistence finally gained traction. That September, she published an editorial about Thanksgiving and wrote directly to President Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln embraced her proposal and on October 3, 1863, proclaimed the last Thursday of November as National Thanksgiving Day, ordering all government offices in Washington to close in observance.

Sarah Josepha Hale lived to enjoy many Thanksgiving celebrations before passing away on April 30, 1879, at age 90.

- ✓ Going to Convention? Count the hours from the time you start packing until you return home.
- ✓ All club and TFRW meetings count – door to door.
- ✓ Calling others to talk about an issue or planning a meeting?
- ✓ It all counts.
- ✓ If you are on social media for a fact-gathering mission and you spread those facts to others, count that time.
- ✓ Non-partisan activities also count if there is a Republican issue involved or a known-Republican running for office.
- ✓ Preparing food for a meal or club meeting? All that counts.
